Final Vows

In recognition of the importance of family and friends in their relationship, Philip and Emily ask that you join in the enactment of their marriage through the recitation of these vows:

Assembled: Philip, do you take Emily to be your wife,
And in doing so commit your life to her,
Encompassing all sorrows and joys,
All hardships and triumphs, and
All the experiences of life?

Philip: I do.

Assembled: Emily, do you take Philip to be your husband,
And in doing so commit your life to him,
Encompassing all sorrows and joys,
All hardships and triumphs, and
All the experiences of life?

Emily: I do.

As our family and friends have become increasingly far flung in the past few years, we'd like to thank our guests for traveling from as far as California, Wyoming, Florida, Georgia, and Massachusetts. We also thank our parents whose love and support reminds us that on the other end of the continent, we still have a place to come home to.
